Fairhope native, John Castorani, announces his bid for Congress in Alabama's First Congressional District

Alabama native, Army veteran, Intelligence Officer, proven leader and conservative who believes in the United States Constitution and protecting individual liberties.

Fairhope, Alabama (Oct. 15) --- Fairhope, Alabama native and Army veteran, John Castorani, today announces his candidacy for Alabama's First Congressional District.

"As a patriot, conservative, veteran and proven leader, I believe I am the best candidate to serve Alabama's First Congressional District," said John Castorani. "I want to fight for limited government, economic freedom, and individual liberty! I also will stand up for the Constitution and empower the next generation so that they can live their American dream."

Raised by a single mother, Castorani grew up in Fairhope and graduated from Fairhope High School. He enlisted in the Army at age 18. His education and training in the Army's staff school led him to a career as an Intelligence Officer. Castorani has spent the past seven years in the Intelligence Community in Northern Virginia.

Castorani believes his service with the Army and Intelligence Community abroad has taught him the importance of listening to others. He believes the voice of the voters is what matters and will help him lead the district with dignity. He will work hard to protect the rights, morals, and values of voters. "I will take voters' concern and voice to Washington and work to ensure their rights under the Constitution are protected," he added.

Rights such as an individual's right to bear arms as outlined in the Second Amendment. We also need to get back to the basics and protect American values such as outlined plans to protect border security, national security, cutting federal debt and overhauling our mandated healthcare system.

In addition and with the U.S. being the leader of the free world, Castorani believes in a bipartisan approach to addressing the problems with national security and immigration by outlining common-sense solutions.

“We should never forget the atrocities on Sept. 11 so we have to stay vigilant to fight against those who want to harm us. As a specialist in counterterrorism, I have fought terrorists all over the world and I know what it takes to protect us against harm from Al Qaeda, ISIS and other terrorist organizations. We also need to be wary of countries such as China, Iran and Russia who pose a legitimate threat against our American way of life, and that’s why we need to work together.”

Because Democrats have refused to address the open borders policy, Castorani wants to create a fair policy for those seeking asylum and legal entry into America by working with states to find solutions for the immigration crisis at our borders and ports of entry.
